Classmates Take the Ice Bucket Challenge

Social media has been buzzing for the past several weeks with the “Ice Bucket Challenge” for raising awareness of the disease amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS). Here are a few classmates who have taken the plunge...

Annual Giving News

The Class of 2007 once again finished the fiscal year strong, with 79 donors to the Annual Fund. This kept '07 in the top tier of young alumni giving with an outstanding 40.9% participation rate!!

Class of 2007: A New Record!

That's right, with 79 donors our class broke its all-time giving mark for the first time since our previous record-setting five-year reunion year. This was due in part to great class participation during the college's first-ever "Day of Giving" challenge held on April 30, 2014. Thanks for all of your support!!

Make a difference!

Classmate News

Syud “Taz” Ahmed was recently profiled in The Daily Star, the largest circulating daily English-language newspaper in Bangladesh. The article, “Science and Percussions”, discusses Taz’s academic and career accomplishments and describes him as someone who “portrays an image of success that every Bangladeshi youth dreams of achieving”. Taz is currently a Senior Scientist at The 3M Company in Minneapolis, MN. Full article here.

Sterling Carter took the centerpiece (you know, the page with the Annual Fund envelope) of the latest issue of Wabash Magazine with his story, “Jazz: A Language Beyond Words”. Sterling is currently working with a nonprofit in South Sudan. You can view the magazine online at www.wabash.edu/magazine

Josh Owens will be a candidate for an at-large seat on the Indianapolis Public Schools (IPS) Board during the November elections. Josh is currently an economics and business professor at Butler University. According to Josh, “You can find out more about the campaign at www.jshowens.com. If you live in the city or want to know more, just shoot me an email at joshua.d.owens@gmail.com. Hope everyone is doing well!”
