October 2019

Greetings,

There are many worthwhile events at Wabash during Homecoming, and this year was no different. A very special reception and book signing occurred on September 27 when Max Servies' book "Some Little Giants! A Brief Wabash College Athletic History: 1865-2017" became public. Max finished the manuscript in 2000 giving it to President Andy Ford. It gathered dust in the archives until Emeritus Professor of Chemistry David Phillips found it and began to edit and update it. The book is well done, has many photographs, costs $29 and is available in the College Bookstore. (It sold out the first day, but the Bookstore will order more.)

Max gave a short speech--unlike others in such circumstances who talk too long--Max had the good sense when to quit. Professor Phillips spoke, again briefly, and then he led the huge crowd in three cheers for Max: "some little giant, Some Little Giant, SOME LITTLE GIANT!" It was neat.

It was nice to see Max and Nancy again. They both appeared to be well even though Max is confined to a wheel chair because of his bad knees. I hadn't seen them since they moved back to Crawfordsville a couple of years ago.

Emeritus? Yes, it's time for me to be an emeritus class agent. My get up and go has gotten up and went. So, before I embarrass myself, you and the College, I'll put my class agent pen away. Until we gather on the other side to sing the Alma Mater, may the Lord bless you, Wabash College and the United States of America.

Yours in Old Wabash,

Gordon
