Dear Class of 1985:

News from 1985:

This annual Wabash alumni-faculty-staff symposium returns after postponements forced by the pandemic. More information is available at: <https://www.wabash.edu/alumni/reunion/schedule>

From Dan Stockton:

"Greetings Kyle. It's been a while since I've updated everyone on my activities so I thought I'd let you know and you can share whatever you like.....or don't like. Anonymity is good too. LOL. I'm married a second time now for 10 yrs and loving life. I'm a supply chain expert and starting a new challenge next week. I'll be the Sr. Production Scheduler at ShelterLogic. They manufacture steel storage units in sizes from sheds to garages. My wife and I are both stage and screen performers. Her latest project is a film on Tubi and Amazon Prime titled "The Gift of Grace". My latest project is a book that I published on Amazon last year titled "Kick the Old Man Out". I have a few years before I retire unlike Mike but my excuse is that my divorce derailed my plans. LOL. My wife and I love to travel and have been very fortunate to do quite a lot. I try to visit as often as possible with our St. Louis alumni group but unfortunately it's been tough the last couple of years to get our schedules to match. Oh and I live in O'Fallon, IL just across the river from St. Louis.

One last thing. I have to give credit to my Wabash education for my career success. My studies in Biology and Chemistry made me the critical thinker I am and allowed me great success in LEAN manufacturing processes and inventory control. Seems like a stretch but not really. Analysis is analysis, right?
