We wanted to shoot you a long-overdue update of what's going on at Wabash. So here goes...

GIVING CHALLENGE

Classmates Rich Calacci, Drew Crousore, Mike Hawksworth, Troy Hockemeyer, John Keith, Roland Morin, and Tim Oliver have joined us in preparing a giving challenge to the Largest Class to Matriculate and Graduate from Wabash College. Look for details very soon.

CROUSORE ON THE BALLOT

Elections for Alumni Trustee on the Board of Trustees and for the Board of Directors for the National Association of Wabash Men are still open until April 25, 2017. Our own Drew Crousore is on the ballot as a NAWM representative to the Board of Trustees, so if you haven't voted yet, please consider a vote for Drew. You can vote online here.

LUKE MESSER FOR SENATE?

The March 23 lead in Roll Call read:

Hoosier politicians call it the "Wabash mafia." And now two graduates of the tiny, all-male college in Indiana are likely to face off in the Republican primary to take on Democratic Sen. Joe Donnelly in 2018.

Will classmate Luke Messer run for Senate? Will Todd Rokita throw his hat in the ring, too? Stay tuned... (Story)

CHANGES TO THE ADMISSIONS SCHEDULE

Moving when parents can file their federal student loan applications to the fall forced a change in the 120-year tradition of Honor Scholar Weekend. The College created a new admissions visit day in December, Scarlet Honors Weekend. "Students were sent a reading, which they had to complete prior to their arrival. Friday afternoon, students were divided into 25 different classes representing almost every department. Each class, led by a faculty member, focused on discussions and interaction, giving prospective students a hands-on opportunity to see what being a Wabash student is like." (Story)

Last month, Wabash Admissions hosted Scarlet Celebration Weekend geared more to those high school seniors with Wabash very high on their list of colleges. Their visit officially kicked off fraternity rush and featured a networking luncheon.

CLASSMATES WITH SONS AT WABASH

Believe it or not, by my count, we have four! Thanks to Rick for his post on our Facebook page.

- Troy Hockemeyer, son Cal '19
- Eric Strehl, son Jared '20
- Rick Stultz, son Drew '20 (pictured)
- Dennis Wilson, son Hunter '20
